DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claims 3-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

It is unclear in claim 8 what is meant by separate headings for expense, debit and credit accounts. It is unclear as debit and credit amounts may exist for each expense account and thus it is unclear if three headings are being claimed or one main heading describing the expense with sub-headings of debit and credit.

It is unclear in claim 12, line 11, what is being claimed in regard to "a plurality of at least N different kinds of said accounting screens". It is unclear what is being claimed if N is equal to zero? The claim claims in effect no accounting screens present. Perhaps this could be clarified by stating something similar to "one or more different kinds of said accounting screens".

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

The changes made to 35 U.S.C. 102(e) by the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999 (AIPA) and the Intellectual Property and High Technology Technical Amendments Act of 2002 do not apply when the reference is a U.S. patent resulting directly or indirectly from an international application filed before November 29, 2000. Therefore, the prior art date of the reference is determined under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) prior to the amendment by the AIPA (pre-AIPA 35 U.S.C. 102(e)).

4. Claims 3-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipate by Clancey et al. (US Patent 6,134,563).

Clancey et al. discloses the claimed computing method for accounting. Clancey et al. discloses spreadsheet software for creating, displaying, entering of values, computing, printing and saving of accounting spreadsheet screens (first file). Clancey et al. further discloses the creation and display of additional files (second file), such as the "second electronic spreadsheet" disclosed in column 3 lines 53+. Clancey also discloses recalling a spreadsheet after calling the additional files and performing predetermined computations and merging of the files into the additional file, such as when the "first spreadsheet" is inserted into the recalled "second spreadsheet" as disclosed in column 3, lines 53+. Regarding the printing of the first file, the printing of documents when complete and/or at the time of saving is inherent and common standard practice of users creating documents in order to obtain a hard copy which not only provides the user the ability to easily review and edit the document, to produce copies for distribution, to produce copies for meetings and or reports, to provide back-up of the information in the case the file may become corrupt, etc... Clancey et al. discloses the method being carried out on a personal computer with Excel in column 7 lines 15+ which inherently have the capability to print documents once completed to obtain hard copies.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. In the event Clancey et al. discussed above is found to not inherently disclose the printing of the first file, claims 3-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Clancey et al. in view of Examiner's Official Notice.

As noted above, it is the Examiner's principle position that claims 3-14 are anticipated by Clancey et al. because the printing of files when completed is inherent.

Art Unit: 3627

However if printing of the first file is not found to be inherent, Examiner takes Official Notice that it is notoriously old and well known in the practice of data processing and document creation for users to print a document when completed, at the time of saving, in order to obtain a hard copy which not only provides the user the ability to easily review and edit the document, produce copies for distribution and meetings and to provide back-up of the information in the case the file may become corrupt. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Clancey et al. to include the printing of the first spreadsheet (first file) when complete and/or at the time of saving in order to obtain a hard copy which not only provides the user the ability to easily review and edit the document, produce copies for distribution and meetings, and to provide back-up of the information in the case the file may become corrupt.

7. Claims 3-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over TurboTax (1997) in view of Examiner's Official Notice.

TurboTax discloses the claimed method for accounting but is silent regarding the creation, storage and printing of the prior year's TurboTax, Quicken or Quickbooks files which are merged (imported) into the next's year's accounting file. Examiner takes Official Notice that the prior year's TurboTax, Quicken or Quickbooks files inherently are created using spreadsheet software, the storage of formulas, use of accounting screens, performance of calculations and creation of a file containing the screens are carried out to produce the files and that the file is saved and printed to provide a back up and a hard copy for submitting and review. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the method of TurboTax with the creation, storage and printing of the prior year's TurboTax, Quicken or Quickbooks files of Examiner's Official Notice, in order to have created the prior year's TurboTax, Quicken or Quickbooks files used for importing data into the current year's file and to provide a saved back up file and a printed copy for submitting and review.

Quicken and Quickbooks are popular accounting software which inherently carry out standard accounting data gathering and presentation.

As an alternative interpretation, it would be obvious that the 1997 TurboTax file would be saved and printed for submission, and that the 1997 file data could be imported into a 1998 TurboTax file.

Response to Arguments

8. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 3-14 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Applicant has argued that Clancey fails to teach the steps of (h) thru (l). Examiner contends that these steps are either disclosed or inherent to Clancey. The storing and printing out the first file created is discussed above and is carried out when the first spreadsheet is created, the document is inherently stored on the computer in order to recall the information; a second file is created at the time the second electronic spreadsheet is created; "calling" the second file to "spread and arrange" after the storing and printing of the first file is performed when the second electronic spreadsheet is viewed; recalling of the first file and performing predetermined calculations based on an accounting method is performed when the first spreadsheet values are automatically inserted into the second spreadsheet; and combining or merging of the first file into the second file is carried out when the values from the first spreadsheet are inserted into the second spreadsheet.

In response to applicant's argument that the references fail to show certain features of applicant's invention, it is noted that the features upon which applicant relies (i.e., the merging of files to increase the amount of entry space in the input cells, as when combining monthly files to produce yearly results) are not recited in the rejected claim(s). Although the claims are interpreted in light of the specification, limitations from the specification are not read into the claims. See In re Van Geuns, 988 F.2d 1181, 26 USPQ2d 1057 (Fed. Cir. 1993).

Conclusion

9. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
